Monday Morning Update

February 26 - March 4

Hello Notre Dame Law School,

I hope all of you had a great weekend! I had the pleasure of travelling to lovely Harrisonburg, Virginia for the wedding of a very close high-school friend. It is sort of weird, I am reaching the age where these things (weddings) happen more often it got me thinking that when you are in law school your life is on sort of a hiatus. In the last three years most of my friends from high-school and college have moved cities, switched jobs, gotten promotions, gotten engaged, or had significant life events. When you are in law school it seems as though you delay things. Maybe you delay an engagement or marriage to your significant other or maybe you even delay having a serious relationship because you don't want to start one with the possibility that you will be moving away from that person in a year or two. Yes, going to law school is advancing your career yet for most of us, we are starting or restarting our professional lives. It is a great three years especially when you consider all of the new fun things you learn and the friends you make, but it is an interesting dynamic when you compare it to friends outside of law school. While they may be "making money" or "growing up," you can explain to them the political and legal significance of hundreds of cases they have never even heard of. It's actually a good feeling.

Now for some Monday Musings:

1. The NCAA was rocked by a huge scandal this weekend implicating many of the top basketball programs in the country. Schools such as Arizona, Duke, Kentucky, Michigan State, and UNC were named in an FBI report detailing how some of their current and past players were given impermissible benefits in return for their services. Even schools with impeccable and rigorous ethical and moral standards like UVA and Notre Dame were named, however these claims are certainly baseless and will surely be cleared up in the coming weeks. Nonetheless, something has to give. If the players are not paid or given something in return for making the schools millions and millions of dollars, schools and boosters will find ways around the rules (or simply break them to get the top recruits. If you pay the basketball players something, you probably have to pay all the other athletes in the school something else too. Can the smaller schools afford this? This debate has been waged for years now but even when the FBI is involved, I do not see the NCAA getting this right.

2. Father Mike is coming up on March 27th. We would love to have more talent and skit/video sign-ups for the show. If you are interested in either, please fill out these forms or contact me if you have any questions:

Talent: <https://goo.gl/forms/Q0DqVsJczOdl9vY83>

Skit/Video: <https://goo.gl/forms/HiLKEvdFj1fcFXDh2>

Tickets will go one sale next week so be sure to pick yours up!

3. Has anyone else noticed that there are only like 5 different artists on the radio these days? It's either Taylor Swift, a member of One Direction who is trying to make it solo, Charlie Puth (whoever that is), Ed Sheeran's "Perfect", Kesha's "Praying," or Cardi B. It's getting to the point where if you don't have an auxiliary cord or Bluetooth in your car to play Spotify or Pandora, I may not get in.

Lots of love,
Drew
