UNIVERSITY OF NOTRE DAME

The Law School

Monday Morning Update

October 2 - October 8

Hello Notre Dame Law School,

I hope everyone had a great weekend! We were treated to some fantastic weather so it looks like my complaining finally paid off! Take that, haters! We are entering the month where we could see some great fall weather or just plain ole winter, so be on the lookout for that snow! It happens here!

As most of you probably saw, Notre Dame torched a much-weaker opponent over the weekend bringing our record for the year up to 4-1, with our lone loss to Georgia looking better every week. However, of course we ask USC to do one thing for us (stay undefeated) and they failed. What was looking like a potentially top-5 USC team coming into Notre Dame on the 21st now looks to be only a top-15 matchup. I am still holding out hope that we will get ESPN's

College Gameday that weekend so stay tuned...

Here are some Monday Musings:

1. I am not sure if everyone else has noticed this, however parking at this school is a major, major problem, at least for those in the law school. The closest lot for those who work and study in the law school is the C lot, just south of Legends. However, due to the ever-existing construction, the spots available are limited and the lot fills up almost completely by 10am. Further, the next lot we can go to is either the lot near the basketball arena or the hockey arena, which means a much longer walk to the law school. Granted, there are lots near the library and Bulla, however at that point, what is even the point of driving if you live a little off-campus which a lot of students do. Is there not one alumni who would rather want to donate a parking garage as opposed to a dorm or building? Do they not realize that how much of a hero they would be?! To give some more information on this ongoing issue at the school, one of my roommates received a $60 ticket for parking at the Bookstore lot for a 1:15 class and earlier that week I had received a $20 ticket for doing the same thing. We figured out that my car did not have a "C" Lot sticker on it because I have been too lazy to put it on. My roommate had the sticker on his car, which I guess indicated to the ticketing officer that he was a student and should have known. However when you think about it, shouldn't I, the believed "visitor" to Notre Dame receive the $60 ticket and the student paying thousands of dollars to attend get the $20 ticket? I really hope this parking issue is solved for the sake of those younger than I. In the meantime, be sure to see me banging my head against my steering wheel as I aimlessly drive around the C Lot waiting for an empty space to magically appear.

2. As some of you may remember, I picked up ice-hockey last week. I played 2 games with the law school team last week and here were the highlights:

- I am the worst player on either team by a very wide margin
- I realized quickly that skating is a HUGE part of the game. People might forget that
- I still can't stop or skate backwards
- I am absolutely terrified every time the puck comes even remotely close to me
- I fell more the second game than the first game, which confused me

Come out and see the Irish Law students pass the puck around this Tuesday at 10:15pm at the Ice Box in South Bend!

3. MLB Playoffs start tomorrow and a lot of teams that are popular with the law school students will be competing. I am personally terrified of the one-game playoff the Yankees must compete in on Tuesday, however I am excited to see everyone wear their baseball gear in this exciting time. This is also a great time of the year to find out where those Cubs/Indians/and I begrudgingly admit, Yankees fans were hiding all year. Testing people's knowledge of their so called "favorite team" is a fun experience that brings hilarious results. Can't wait to hear people answer "David Ross" or "Derek Jeter" as the player they think will make the biggest difference in a series...

4. I saw on twitter that Professors Pojanowski, Garnett, and McKenna shared a thread from Neal Katyal (@neal_katyal) and I encourage every student to read the long thread (especially 1Ls). It gives helpful advice on being a law student and as things pick up here at the law school, some of this advice will be very helpful. The thread is located here: https://twitter.com/neal_katyal/status/914493979051388930

Go Irish, Beat Tar Heels. Go Hoos, Beat Dook.

Lots of love,
Drew

Intensive Trial Advocacy

The Intensive Trial Advocacy class is in need of law school students to volunteer their time as jurors.

The trials are scheduled for Saturday October 7, and Sunday, October 8 (you do not have to attend both dates), at the Saint Joseph County Courthouse in downtown South Bend. Notre Dame Law Students in the Intensive Trial Advocacy class will serve as the lawyers, and real judges or practicing attorneys will preside over every trial.

NOTE: Law School students that volunteer as jurors receive priority registration to take the Intensive Trial Advocacy class or the Comprehensive Trial Advocacy class (applied Spring Semester 2018 or Fall Semester 2018).

1L OF THE WEEK

This week's 1L of the Week is Elias Ayoub! If you see him this week, grab this man a coffee.

Let's get to know Elias a bit more, shall we? Thanks, Elias!

Q: Where did you attend undergrad?

A: Canisius College.

Q: Where's your hometown?

A: Buffalo, New York. How 'bout them Bills?!

Q: What did you do before law school?

A: Woke up every morning, brushed my teeth, and lived a balanced life. Those were the good old days...No, but actually, I went straight through from undergrad.

Q: What did you do this summer?

A: I bartended at boujee waterfront cocktail bar. I'm not saying I'm good at making drinks, but I'm sure faster than anyone working at Corby's these days.

Ok now for the serious questions:

Q: Do you know what AIM was and if so, what was your screenname?

A: I know what AIM is, but sadly I never used it. I prefer handwritten correspondence and sonnets.

Drew Side-Note: We finally found someone who didn't use AIM. I was actually starting to think it lasted longer than I had previously. But alas, Elias has let me down.

Q: Describe your perfect day.

A: Only seven weeks into law school I feel a little guilty saying a day where I don't have to read out of a casebook, so I'll get a little more inventive. I'm half way between a day on the couch marathoning LOTR movies and eating pancakes, or partying the night away after a Buffalo Sabres Stanley Cup victory. Total toss up.

Drew-Side Note: One of these things is A LOT more believable than the other. A championship? In Buffalo? #LGR

Q: What was the last thing you geeked out about? Where were you?

A: I consider myself quite calm in the face of great excitement, it's a noble character trait. Yet, I met John Roberts last year and talked with him personally for a half hour and that was pretty cool. Also, literally every time I try a new coffee is a trepidatious rush before the first sip.

Drew Side-Note: When the New York Rangers signed Kevin Shattenkirk for a team-friendly deal with a reasonable term and price. I was at the Newark Airport and checking twitter every five-seconds.

Q: If you created your own country what would it be called? Who would be King?

A: Addressing the latter half first, obviously me. Unless I was some sort of deity. Which, I suppose is entirely reasonable within the grounds of this hypo considering I created a country. However, if I were the King, I would have the name of the country change on a biweekly basis. Therefore I could never get sick of it and legal employment would boom. There would be whole firms dedicated to revamping founding documents, treaties, statutes, etc.

Drew Side-Note: Either Drewland or Mageeville. I would like to say I would be King, but it would either be Henrik Lundqvist or Derek Jeter. I could be convinced to let The Rock run it as well...

HAVE A GREAT WEEK!
