Monday Morning Update

May 1 - 7

Hello Notre Dame Law School,

I hope you all had a great weekend! If you are anything like me you spent your weekend thinking about how much you have to do before finals, but not doing much about it, and mashing the repeat button on the new DJ Khaled/Justin Bieber jam "I'm The One." Wow, what a song. Here are some Monday Musings:

1. I apologize for not giving a shout out to the Bowling Champions, Paul McCartney Is Dead, last week. In addition to complaining about South Bend and tailgating for football games, I personally think the Thursday night bowling league in the Spring is one of the best things we do as a collective law school. But back to the champions, man, did they have an impressive season. Going into the championship game, they amassed 7,245 pins, breaking down to a weekly average 5-bowler score of 724.5. If we break that out even more, that is an average score of just about 145 per reporting bowler (per week!). Their best week, in which they reported a team score of 809 pins, meant that the average score of the bowlers reporting their scores was 161.8! Good job, guys! V impressive! I should also take this time to thank the auditors of the bowling scores. I'm sure you verified every reported score and always doubled checked everything! I think it was PwC this year? (Aside: if you want a good time-wasting internet rabbit-hole, look up "Paul McCartney is actually dead" theories. Wild.)

2. 1Ls, good luck with these last two weeks. You are very closing to being done.

3. I would also like to thank from the bottom of my heart all of the 3Ls for their tremendous work this year and the last two years. Without your effort and commitment to the law school, we would not be the law school we are today. We will certainly miss you guys next year! Don't be strangers!

4. 2Ls, ㄒ_(ツ)_ㄒ

5. This week was much shorter than the last two, but hey, I got finals, people.

Please keep the New York Rangers in your prayers this week. Thank you.

Lots of love,
Drew

Financial Tips

If you are graduating in May:

1. Try to make extra payments on loans, when possible, to save on interest charges, and
2. Consider looking into various financial planning services (such as this, this, or this) to assist with future expenditures and life events.

If you are a 2L or 1L returning in the fall:

1. Apply for external scholarships (look here, here, and here), and
2. Look into cost-saving measures, such as getting a roommate to reduce housing expenses and eliminating credit card debt.
