News and Notes

Carter Snead was appeared on WSBT Fact Finder news segment about Indiana's feticide law on July 16.

Rick Garnett wrote Worth Worrying About? Same-Sex Marriage & Religious Freedom, published in Commonweal on July 17. The piece discusses religious-freedom and the SSM decisions.

Last week the American Association of Law Libraries' Annual Meeting was held in Seattle, Washington. Chris O'Byrne, Dwight King, Joe Reimers, Joe Thomas, Sandra Klein, Trezlen Drake, and Warren Rees were in attendance. Congratulations to Joe Reimers, who was awarded a travel grant to attend the annual meeting.

Dean's Bookshelf

I returned from vacation to find the April 2013 issue of the Notre Dame Law Review containing Bob Blakey's exhaustive article on RICO time-bars and a note stating "You should have run me off years ago. It has done wonders for my scholarship."

G. Robert Blakey, Time-Bars: RICO-Criminal and Civil-Federal and State, 88 N.D. L. Rev. 1581-1783 (2013).

Many thanks and congratulations to Bob!

CCHR News

Esther Terry joins the Center for Civil and Human Rights as Program Coordinator for the Center's new Project on Catholic Social Thought and International Human Rights Law. In this capacity, Esther will develop an online research tool for scholars and practitioners that will facilitate identifying convergences between documents of Catholic social teaching and human rights. Esther's interest in human rights began with an undergraduate research essay on Bartolomé de Las Casas and has developed gradually through experiences in Central and South America, most recently spending time with deported migrants on the U.S.-Mexico border. She previously worked at the Kellogg Institute for International Studies in events, publications, and research. Esther holds undergraduate degrees in English and Spanish from Hillsdale College and a Master of Theological Studies from the University of Notre Dame. Welcome Esther!
