NDLS,

It will be very cold this week. It might toughen your skin up. Or freeze your skin off. It's like a terrible arctic choose-your-own-adventure game!

Go Irish,

#ConTent? I just got to this campground and haven't gotten a chance to set up mine yet, no way am I setting yours up. Do it yourself.

My dears,

I can't get over all of the non-legal stuff surrounding Roger Stone, y'all. The guy has a Nixon tattoo on his upper back. And it's not like a cartoony, this-was-a-fun-thing-I-did-in-college tat. It's a full-on, centrally-situated tattoo of President Richard Nixon's face on his back. Fully detailed. The thing even has drawn-on dimples.

Can you imagine being that tattoo artist? Like, my guy Roger Stone comes in, sits in the chair, and says "Yes, that Richard Nixon. Mhm. The President. Yup."

And then he AGREES to give him the tattoo. Are there Model Rules of Professional Conduct for tattoo artists? I don't know much about most things, let alone tattoos (I have none), but I feel like that has to be a violation. Even if you're not friends with homeboy Rodge, I feel like you have to do the guy a solid and refuse service. "Hey man, it seems like you're really going through some stuff right now, do you want to call someone close to you? Just take a few days to really think about it. Or I can give you a really corny lyric armband in a foreign language. Your choice. No, really. Not Nixon."

Just. Wow, man. Wow. WOW.

MEME OF THE WEEK -

1L OF THE WEEK

The 1L of the week is Jaemie Paraon! Jaemie was a delight to interview despite being very, very cold. Buy her a coffee (or hot chocolate) this week.

Q: Where are you from?

A: I'm from LA - the Torrance, South Bay Region, to be more specific.

Q: Where did you attend undergrad?

A: I went to Berkeley up in the Bay Area, definitely a little different than Notre Dame.

Q: What's your favorite non-law school activity?

A: A lot of people actually don't know this, but I like to write short pieces of fiction. Not that I show anyone. I write songs as well - I play the guitar and piano, I like to sing. Law school has stifled tons of creativity, so any moment I can step away to do those things.

Q: Are you fully equipped for the polar vortex?

A: I am not. I am not... I'm gathering and acquiring many layers, more than should be done. I'm buying clothes that I didn't realize existed. I have a collection of beanies now. I barely move my car, which is sitting in a garage, happily. I'm considering Blue Apron and Hello Fresh. So no - I'm woefully unprepared for what's to come.

Q: More importantly, are you fully equipped to talk about how cold it is at school?

A: Totally. I feel like people know I'm from California, so throughout orientation week people gave me the "I'm so sorry" look. I told them to ask me how I am in a few months and... it's not great. I was pretty set on going back to California after law school but these last few weeks have affirmed that.

Q: What's your favorite movie of all time?

A: OH. I was just telling this to someone a few nights ago, and I'm so not ashamed to tell you that it's School of Rock. I watched it as a kid and I was so inspired, I was all for it. Jack Black is an icon.

Q: Do you think we've had enough of the Bachelor?

A: Ugh. I'm very biased on this because I love the Bachelor. I'm actually a two-time defending champion of a fantasy league. We've done four seasons so far, this is the fifth. I've won the championship twice and came in second twice. So I can't get enough of the Bachelor. This year, my number one pick was Cassie, a speech pathologist from Long Beach. You gotta pick the datable person. So yeah, we have not had enough of the Bachelor.

* LIGHTNING ROUND*

Q: Nicolas Cage or Xander Cage?

A: Nicolas.

Q: Eskimo coats or Eskimo hats?

A: Coats.

Q: Soup or Salad?

A: Soup! Yeah!

Q: High Fives or Low Fives?

A: High fives.

Q: Beep or Boop?

A: Beep.

Q: Do you have anything else you'd like to say to all of your fans?

A: My new album drops next month~~!!!!

Q: Who should be 1L of the week next week?

A: Ummmm let's see. JP Simon. I don't know if he's on facebook as John Paul.

#3LOL OF THE WEEK

This week's 3LOL of the week is Jake "Indy" Kovalsky! As his God-given nickname might suggest, Jake is from Indiana. With that birthplace comes great responsibility. I got a chance to get to know Indy really well last year when we lived together, and he is, in a word, a-really-awesome-and-handsome-man-who-loves-benches.

Jake also has a love-hate relationship with wild animals born from growing up on one of the largest farms in Indiana. At 9, Jake rode calves around in his backyard. At 11, he was known state-wide as a bull-rider. He's one with nature and with the wilderness.

So, after moving into our 2L home and discovering it basically overrun with wild animals, me and my roommates had an incredible asset in our midst. The animal? A groundhog. The time? Early fall 2017. The groundhog's name? Ernest.

Ernest lived under our front steps. Because our landlord didn't believe that we had so many animals living in our walls, the task fell to Jake to capture and peaceably release the animal under the laws of Indiana. To make sure we did all the right things, Jake took to conducting intense research on those laws. We cleanly caught the beast and fed him while he was in captivity. I jokingly (not joking) called Ernest my son.

We needed to release the animal on non-private, in-state property. We also needed to protect ourselves from this vicious animal. I was unaware how ferocious - nay, terrifying - groundhogs are. That overrated Bill Murray movie was a lie. Jake understood this. I did not.

But how do you protect yourself from a large, caged rodent? Well, with a broom, of course! I put the beast in the trunk of my 2005 White Chevy Equinox (standard package) and Jake held the beast at bay by holding the broom like a long rifle and shrilly screaming in tongues. It was truly magnificent.

We released my son in peace in a local park and have not heard from him since. As he ran away, I turned to Jake and thanked him for being so cool, calm, and collected during this journey.

"Little guy never stood a chance against us," he told me, smirking, brimming with confidence that comes from asserting dominance over a small mammal.

No, he didn't, Indy. No, He didn't.
