My lil' fruit tarts that come with tasty fresh lime puree on top,

Not going to lie, I don't really have much to say right now. We're coming up on Spring Break, so the semester's getting a little real. I've replied to far too many graduation e-mails from the school that keep reminding me of my impending return to reality.

I'm not doing anything particularly exciting for spring break, but it's going to be quite nice to spend time at home with the family, to recharge, and to play with my sister's puppy. I hope you all have an equally restful break!

SONG OF THE WEEK - Gold on the Ceiling - The Black Keys

MEME OF THE WEEK -

1L OF THE WEEK

The 1L of the week is Rose Mooney! Rose was kind enough to answer my questions even after writing her brief all week, which shows a level of empathy not often found this side of the Mississippi. Her reward should be all the coffee (or maybe a scoop of ice cream) her heart desires!

Q: Where are you from?

A: I'm from North Attleborough, Massachusetts, home of the Patriots.

Q: Where did you attend undergrad?

A: St. Anselm College, it's a super tiny liberal arts school in Manchester, New Hampshire. People say it's a bad city, but I think it's pretty cool. It's like 30 mins from the beach, and has skiing.

Q: Last week, Lauren let us know that you're a Pats fan. I guess my question is: why?

A: Yeah, Gillette Stadium is like three miles from my house. It's a fun environment. The players are really active in the community; my family are all huge fans so it's just really fun.

Q: What's your favorite hobby?

A: In law school or out of law school? I'm a very outdoorsy person. I like going to the beach, hiking, sailing, running - anything outdoors, really. I'm trying to think of something weird - I really like ice cream and consider myself an ice cream connoisseur, I even put it on my resume.

Q: Who wins in a fight - a very strong horse, or a regular lion?

A: A very strong horse. I interned on a horse farm once in New Hampshire. They were all very small and I was still terrified of their strength and speed in general. I've never seen a lion.

Q: Why is it so cold still?

A: GOOD QUESTION. I think this week we're supposed to have record lows in Indiana. I just saw that on the news. I'm hoping when we come back from spring break it will be like a paradise.

Q: Tell me about the last trip you went on.

A: Oof, umm, so last year I was teaching English in Spain. I'm trying to think of the last trip I went on in Spain - I went to the southern coast of Portugal. It was a small city named Faro. Really great seafood, not super touristy. I liked it a lot.

* LIGHTNING ROUND*

Q: The Young or The Restless?

A: Young

Q: Bingo or Bango?

A: Bingo

Q: Apples or Oranges?

A: Apples

Q: #Lit or Fuego?

A: Fuego

Q: Sky diving or Scuba Diving?

A: Scuba Diving

Q: Do you have anything else you'd like to say to all of your fans?

A: Oh, gosh. Ummmmmmmmmm no. I don't think I have any fans. And if I did I think everyone's dead after this week, so.

Q: Who should be 1L of the week next week?

A: I'm trying to think. Has Daniela Johnson Restrepo done it? No? Her.

Long Reads of the Week

- Rembrandt in the Blood: An Obsessive Aristocrat, Rediscovered Paintings and an Art-World Feud
 - No one had spotted a new painting by the Dutch master for four decades — until the scion of a storied Amsterdam family found two.
- The Greeter

- At age sixteen, the daughter of a wealthy Florida couple with chemical dependencies found herself facing her uncertain future, tangled in a web of trauma, self-harm, sexual objectification, and leaning on her tight relationships with other young women. This essay is part of the author's forthcoming memoir, Long Live the Tribe of Fatherless Girls.
- My Mother's Daughter
 - In this personal essay, Molly Jong Fast considers her famous parents' and grandparents' tendencies toward infidelity, and how she is still affected, as an adult child.
- A BuzzFeed Reporter Explains His Controversial Reporting on Michael Cohen and Donald Trump
 - I'll say this: Cohen totally understood he was being directed to lie. And my understanding, sticking to and standing behind what my sources said, is that Cohen was directed to lie. And I also expect that more information will come out that will make it even clearer that this was in fact a directive. And, again, Cohen used the word "directly." We said "directed."

Have a good week! Go Irish!
