My studious lil' Irish smooshes,

Shouts out to all you folks that had to look up whether "penultimate" meant "this is the last time I have to scour Bill's MMU, thank heavens" only to be disappointed that, in fact, there's one more to come next week. You rule.

Thank you all for coming to the Father Mike Show and making it a success. That was the funnest night of my entire time at this school, and I hope that, if you came, you had a good time. Someone spent over $200 on pie, because Reid Fulkerson could sell the pants off a plastic bag to you and you'd still hug him after. Whoever bought the pies, though, is the actual hero of the story because Dwight King's pies are heaven on a plate.

Anywho, I'm feeling sappy over not getting to do this job anymore, even though I won't miss the e-mails (Hi haters). Yes, I'm complaining about e-mails within an e-mail I've blasted out to you. No, I will not come back and delete this at 7 a.m.

I've often ranted to people in the law school about how taking on many responsibilities is something that you should not do. And maybe you shouldn't - . But this year (and especially the last two weeks), I've learned some of the value behind throwing your weight behind multiple heavy tasks at once. Some benefits include:

- I found myself a lot more focused on individual things when I did them
- I racked up infinite fitbit steps
- When I went on Amazon.com, I didn't feel the need to buy things out of boredom

I do think being focused on one or two primary non-law school "things" is good for anyone in law school. For sure, side hustles and hobbies are vital in life generally. I probably went a little bit overboard in my time here. But, and this is more for the 1Ls, try to remember that doing "more" will likely leave you feeling better about how you've spent your time in South Bend, not worse. Having extra responsibilities gets you up, out of the house, and out of your comfort zone.

So when people ask you to do things: say yes! You probably won't regret it.

SONG OF THE WEEK - [Old Town Road \(Feat. Billy Ray Cyrus\) \[Remix\]](#) - Lil Nas X

MEME OF THE WEEK -

when you cite to a case you know nothing about

1L OF THE WEEK

The 1L of the week is Molly Connor! Molly was a delight to talk to and recently pet a dog. "A dog?" you might ask. Yes, a dog. We talked about that, and Molly indulged a very tough lightning round, so buy her a coffee if you see her in the Commons!

Q: Where are you from?

A: I am from outside of Philadelphia. Villanova-area, right by the college. It's a town called Bryn Mawr.

Q: Where did you attend undergrad?

A: I went to Boston College.

Q: What's your favorite hobby?

A: Um. My favorite hobby is probably running - I don't know if it counts as a hobby, but it's probably what I do the most outside of law school. I didn't run the Holy Half because I heard about it late and hurt my knee a little bit, but I know people that ran it and they seemed to have a good time!

Q: How'd your bracket do?

A: Not that well, so I had Duke winning it all. I have three older brothers and they all went to Duke, so I grew up watching Duke basketball - so not good.

Q: How do you think you'd fare in a zombie apocalypse?

A: So this is funny, I've actually discussed this at length with my brothers and they don't think I'd fare very well in a post-apocalyptic world. They came up with all these jobs that you'd have to have in that type of world and I was always in a job that was meaningless. So I don't think I'd do great.

Q: How does it feel to have survived your first South Bend winter?

A: It feels good! So I lived in Boston for college and lived there for three years before coming to law school. The winter's there are pretty comparable so I wasn't caught off-guard.

Q: What is one thing you've done today that was not outlining?

A: Ohhhh, umm, that stinks because I did a lot of outlining today. I'm so behind. In-between outlining I called everyone in my family, which is rare because there's five people, but one of my New Year's resolutions was to call them more so I knocked that out today.

Q: When was the last time you pet a dog? Tell me about that.

A: I volunteered at the St. Joseph Humane Society, not yesterday, but a few weeks ago, and I had a little dog - actually, it was a very overweight dog, but little - named Scamp come up to me. The people told me I had to walk him a lot because he needed to lose weight. I was very tired at the end.

* LIGHTNING ROUND*

Q: Bacon or eggs?

A: Eggs

Q: Hero or villain?

A: Hero

Q: Fit or bit?

A: Fit

Q: Toys or tots?

A: Tots

Q: Patrick Star or Patrick Stewart?

A: Patrick Star

Q: Do you have anything else you'd like to say to all of your fans?

A: Um, no. I see that every week in the MMU and I saw someone said they don't have any fans - I would second that.

Q: Who should be the FINAL 1L of the week for my MMU writings.

A: Oh, wow! Ummm. Do you have a list of who's been chosen already? Joanna Howe.

Long Reads of the Week

- How Rupert Murdoch's Empire of Influence Remade the World
 - A simply incredible chronicle of the media mogul's empire, family, and drama. Been thinking about this piece all week and needed to share it out. This type of journalism is, in itself, worth the price of admission to the NYT.
- 'Someone Is Always Trying to Kill You'
 - The United States cannot erect a wall and expect women to resign themselves to being slaughtered. The murder of Sherill Yubissa Hernandez Mancía explains why Central American women are fleeing north.
- What was the Washington Post Afraid of?
 - Irin Carmon and Amy Brittain were on the verge of publishing an investigation looking into sexual misconduct allegations against a powerful executive at CBS. But the Washington Post decided not to run the story. Carmon looks back at how an important story was killed.
- A Sand County Photograph

- The Baraboo Nazi Prom Photo Shocked The World. The City's Response Shocked Its Residents.
- The intentions behind the Nazi salute photograph seen around the world were hardly as sinister as they first appeared. But in Trump and Twitter's America, as one small Midwestern town discovered, image is everything.
- Other Rachel Lyons
 - Having a fairly common name gives Rachel Lyon occasional glimpses into the lives of her doppelgangers — and the roads she has not taken.

Have a good week! Go Irish!
