Justice Antonin Scalia Visits NDLS

In mid-October, NDLS welcomed U.S. Supreme Court Associate Justice Antonin Scalia for a visit that featured two days of talks and question-and-answer sessions with faculty and students. On the afternoon of Sunday, October 14, he addressed students and faculty in the Law School courtroom, socialized with students in the Law School student lounge, and had dinner with NDLS faculty and administrators at a dinner in the Notre Dame Stadium pressbox. On Monday, October 15, he conducted a question-and-answer session with NDLS students in the courtroom.

Justice Scalia's visit was sponsored by the Judge James J. Clynes Jr. Visiting Chair in Judicial Ethics, a gift of Honorable James J. Clynes Jr., a 1945 graduate of the University of Notre Dame and 1948 graduate of the Cornell Law School. Judge Clynes served in various positions in city government in Ithaca, New York, including city judge from 1969 to 1989, and is currently a member of Treman & Clynes and Of Counsel at Harris, Beach & Wilcox in Ithaca. He has been a member of the Law School Advisory Council since 1983, and is a fellow of the American College of Trust and Estate Counsel.

Jimmy Gurulé Featured in NEWSWEEK Cover Story

The cover story section of the October 29, 2001, edition of NEWSWEEK magazine includes a feature article titled A New Wave of Commanders that features a number of the key Bush Administration officials involved in the new war on terrorism. Among those profiled is Jimmy Gurulé, currently on leave from NDLS to serve as undersecretary for enforcement in the U.S. Treasury Department. The profile talks of his background in federal drug investigations as a young attorney with the U.S. Department of Justice in the late 1980s and notes that he is now the highest-ranking Latino law enforcement official in the country.

Jimmy's part in fighting the current battles with terrorists includes forming a special team of financial analysts and investigators who have been involved in tapping into thousands of computer databases to track the money used to fund the hijackings. Although he has expressed his frustration at the lack of intelligence-sharing among U.S. agencies, Jimmy is confident that the agencies that report to him will be able to follow the money trail to wherever it ends.

Alumni Notes

NDLS Alumnus and Veteran Addresses Notre Dame ROTC

While visiting campus for the ND-Michigan State football game in September, Thomas P. Foy Jr. '38, '39J.D. had the opportunity to address members of Notre Dame's ROTC program on his involvement in military service in World War II - service that includes surviving the infamous Bataan death march and 3-1/2 years as a Japanese prisoner of war.

As a young lawyer in Silver City, New Mexico, Mr. Foy joined the New Mexico National Guard as a reservist in early January of 1941. The day after Mr. Foy joined, President Franklin D. Roosevelt called Guard units throughout the country into active service. He trained for eight months at Fort Bliss, Texas, before being sent to Clark Field near Manila, Philippines. Armed with World War I artillery and ammunition, Mr. Foy and his fellow Guard members were told to defend Clark and other nearby airfields. Eventually, however, the troops were overrun by Japanese forces and surrendered. Mr. Foy explained that American troops were outnumbered "15 or 20 to 1," and no help was in sight. Consequently, the commander of U.S. forces in the Philippines surrendered in April of 1942, by which time Mr. Foy had received a battlefield promotion to second lieutenant.

He endured the five-day, 60-mile march northward to Bataan, through stifling heat and with little food or water for sustenance. An estimated 650 American soldiers, and 5,000 to 10,000 Filipinos died during the torturous march. As prisoners of war, an estimated 4,500 additional Americans died in the camps in the Philippines.

In addition to all of the physical and psychological difficulties he endured, Mr. Foy commented to the students that a Japanese guard forced him to give up his Notre Dame class ring. He thinks it may still be somewhere in the Philippines or Japan.

He later joined a contingent of POWs who were transported to Japan for final interment. Mr. Foy and his fellow soldiers spent more than 40 months total in captivity, and were liberated about a month after the Japanese surrender in August of 1945.

Major Gary Masapolio, head of Notre Dame's Army ROTC program, commented to the students that the courage of men such as Mr. Foy exemplifies what Notre Dame tries to instill in its graduates. "They fought on against overwhelming odds. [Mr. Foy] is a strong example of the school motto - God, country, Notre Dame."

A life-long resident of South Bend, Mr. Tulchinsky graduated from Central High School at the age of 16, and worked his way through Notre Dame, graduating magna cum laude with his bachelor's degree and cum laude with his law degree.

Mr. Tulchinsky also belonged to the St. Joseph County Bar Association, the Hebrew Orthodox Congregation, B'nai B'rith and the Robin Hood Men's Golf Association.
