Editor's Note—On behalf of the Notre Dame Law Review, I extend our thanks to Professor J. Thomas Oldham for organizing this symposium and for inviting us to publish it in our journal. We are grateful as well for the contributions of so many distinguished authors and for their patient assistance as we prepared their articles for print. I would personally like to thank the staff of Volume '76, which itself prepared this issue from the beginning of the process up to the very last stages of editing. I am grateful that with me at these last stages, too, is Christine Gould Hamm, whom I have kept busy all year catching my mistakes, and who, on top of such a monstrous job, has somehow found time to welcome her daughter, Meredith, into the world. Finally, I thank my grandparents, Gertrude and Philip Schaeffer, for their boundless love and generosity.
