I. ABOUT THE 2008 JOURNAL OF LEGISLATION SYMPOSIUM

On April 17, 2008, the Journal of Legislation held its annual symposium at Notre Dame Law School. We were privileged to spend the day listening to presentations by our featured speakers, followed by a panel discussion focused on the topic of unjust legislation.

We selected unjust legislation as a topic because we felt that it would be of particular interest to the students at Notre Dame, given the institution's strong Catholic identity and commitment to social justice. It is our hope, however, that this topic is also of interest to all students entering the legal profession. Two of our speakers, Father Theodore Hesburgh and Mr. Thulani Mabaso, spoke about their firsthand experiences working to change racially discriminatory laws in the United States and South Africa respectively. Our other speakers, Professor Bridgette Carr and Professor Paolo Carozza, then shaped the discussion by offering their insights from the perspective of the legal profession. Collectively, the symposium explored the challenges and difficulties that we, as future lawyers, may face as we strive both to uphold the rule of law and to ensure that the laws we are upholding are just.

II. FEATURED SPEAKERS

Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C.

Longest-running President of the University of Notre Dame and
Charter Member of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights from 1957-72

The Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C. is considered to be one of the twentieth century's most influential figures in the field of higher education. He served as President of the University of Notre Dame from 1952-1987, the longest tenure at that time among active presidents of American colleges and universities. At Notre Dame, Father Hesburgh has created the Notre Dame Law School Center of Civil and Human Rights, the Notre Dame Kellogg Institute for International Studies, and the Kroc Institute for International Peace Studies.

During his lifetime, Father Hesburgh has addressed many of the most significant social issues of our time. He has held sixteen presidential appointments. His policy work was extremely influential during the civil rights movement, and his public service has also addressed topics as varied as the peaceful use of atomic energy, Vietnam-era campus unrest, Third World development, and immigration reform. Father Hesburgh has served four popes, and he holds the world record for most honorary degrees (150 degrees from colleges and universities around the world). His autobiography, "God, Country, Notre Dame," was published in November 1990 and became a national best seller.

A great deal of Father Hesburgh's public service has dealt with unjust legislation in the context of the civil rights movement. In 1957, Father Hesburgh became a Charter Member of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. In 1969, he was elevated to Chairman of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights—a position that he held until 1972.

In July 2000, the nation formally honored Father Hesburgh for his public service when he became the first person from the field of higher education to be awarded the Congressional Gold Medal.

Mr. Thulani Mabaso

Former Robben Island political prisoner during South Africa's apartheid era

Mr. Thulani Mabaso was a political prisoner on Robben Island (Cape Town, South Africa) during South Africa's apartheid era. The apartheid government imprisoned him for sixteen years, brutally torturing him, along with fellow prisoner Nelson Mandela and others within the Robben Island facility.

After he was released in 1990, Mr. Mabaso participated in the "Truth and Reconciliation" process led by his friend, Archbishop Desmond Tutu, where he encountered some of his former captors. One of his former tormentors even approached him to apologize.

Mr. Mabaso now works on Robben Island, where he leads tours. He meets with visiting dignitaries and other visitors and speaks about the power of reconciliation, forgiveness, and the need for unity in South Africa. In his own words: "We need to make sure that what happened to us never happens to future generations."
