Election 2000 Results

Consumed as we have been with the never-ending saga of the presidential election, some final results of Election 2000 may have escaped notice. NDLS alumni who successfully won election, re-election or re-confirmation bids included:

- Joseph P. Albright Jr. ‘60, ‘62J.D., elected to the West Virginia Supreme Court;
- John W. Dell ‘62J.D., reconfirmed as a judge in Florida’s 4th Judicial District (Palm Beach County);
- John J. Frese ‘75J.D., reconfirmed as a judge in St. Joseph County (Indiana) Superior Court;
- Peter T. King ‘68J.D., re-elected to the U.S. House of Representatives to represent the Long Island area of New York;
- Jenny Pitts Manier ‘82, ‘85J.D., reconfirmed as a judge in St. Joseph County (Indiana) Superior Court;
- Peter J. Visclosky ’73J.D., re-elected to the U.S. House of Representatives to represent northwest Indiana; and
- Mark Warpinski ‘73J.D., elected in April to the circuit court in Brown County, Wisconsin.

In addition, Hon. Sanford M. Brook, former adjunct associate professor of law in the trial advocacy program at NDLS, was reconfirmed to the Indiana Court of Appeals.
Faculty opinions on Elections 2000 are as varied as the members of the faculty themselves. Here is a sampling of recent comments in the media across the country.

John Nagle has serious reservations about any judicial efforts to force a new vote for president in Palm Beach County, Florida. “The fact that the voters in Palm Beach County apparently were confused by the ballot and voted for Buchanan instead of Gore, or accidentally voted twice for president and had their ballots disqualified, troubles me,” he said. “I am even more concerned, though, about trying to do something about it.”

John says he is unaware of any previous judicial decisions that accepted a voter’s or a candidate’s post-election complaint about the format of a ballot. “In fact, the only case I know of is from Florida in the 1970s when an appeals court rejected a Republican complaint about the format,” he says. “Surely such questions have arisen many, many times before in our history, yet there is no evidence that I have found that the courts intervened in this kind of situation.”

He added, “Elections must be governed by rules. Like rules of civil procedure and statutes of limitation, the rules can provide difficult results when applied to individual circumstances. But the alternative to having clear, fixed rules is too terrible to contemplate. Once we allow voters to petition some administrative official to allow them to change or add their vote because the voter made some kind of mistake, the possibilities for voting fraud increase dramatically.”

In a November 15th article in the TIMES-PICAYUNE (New Orleans, Louisiana), Charles E. Rice succinctly answered the question of what the Constitution advises in such circumstances in his classic style: “Damned if I know.” He then addressed whether or not Congress could postpone the December 18th vote of Electors in the event the Florida recount takes longer than that. “The way this is going, the lawyers have taken over the whole thing, and it's going to the court,” he said. “What do we do if this does grind on and on? Anybody who tells you he's got all the answers is blowing smoke. We don't know. If you do find out, let me know.”

Rick and Nicole Garnett are among the attorneys who advised the Bush campaign on legal and criminal matters throughout the campaign. Rick also wrote an op-ed piece that appeared on National Review Online and was picked up by the Los Angeles Times Syndicate on vice-presidential candidate Senator Joe Lieberman’s recent speech on family values at Notre Dame in October. The article can be found in the Sunday, October 29, 2000, on line edition at www.latimes.com/news/comment/20001029/t000103339.html

Those watching television closely recently might have noticed a somewhat younger looking Dean Emeritus David T. Link ‘58 ‘61J.D. hand-inspecting ballots in file footage of the 1986 election for Indiana’s 3rd Congressional District. News reports covering the happenings in Florida – including November 15th interviews on ABC-TV’s “Good Morning America” and National Public Radio’s “Talk of the Nation” with Indiana’s former Secretary of State and Governor, and now U.S. Senator, Evan Bayh – have looked at that election, in which the difference was a mere 47 votes, for guidance on how to proceed in any hand recount. Senator Bayh mentioned that he asked Dean Link, “a widely-respected, independent figure,” to help him make some of the decisions in running the recount. Senator Bayh further commented that Florida’s Secretary of State might seek such help to fend off concerns that partisan politics influenced her decisions regarding the recounts.
Professor Rodes Honored

On October 24, 2000, Bob Rodes celebrated his inauguration as the Paul J. Schierl / Fort Howard Paper Corporation Professor of Legal Ethics with a lecture, mass and dinner with his friends and colleagues.

In the Law School courtroom, he lectured on “Forming an Agenda: Ethics and Legal Ethics,” which discussed the role that the lawyer’s ethics and the client’s ethics play in forming an agenda for the lawyer’s representation of the client. Honorable John T. Noonan Jr., the Judge James J. Clynes Jr. Visiting Professor of Law, and Thomas L. Shaffer ’61J.D., the Robert and Marion Short Professor Emeritus of Law, provided commentary after the lecture, which was attended by faculty, students and friends of Professor Rodes and his wife Jeanne.

After the lecture, Reverend Dexter S. Brewer, S.J., ’82J.D. celebrated mass in the Alumni Hall Chapel. The evening concluded with a dinner in the Faculty Dining Room of South Dining Hall attended by over 80 guests, including the Rodes’s son and daughter-in-law, David and Jane Rodes of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and Susan R. Schierl Sullivan ’89J.D., daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Paul J. Schierl ’57, ’61J.D., of Green Bay, Wisconsin.

Olin Foundation Renews Support for Natural Law Institute

The Natural Law Institute, co-directed by Gerry Bradley and John Finnis, has received a $225,000 grant from the John M. Olin Foundation to support the publication of the American Journal of Jurisprudence. The journal, which was published from 1956 until 1970 as the Natural Law Forum, is a unique periodical devoted to the scholarly investigation of all aspects of natural law, including its relevance to the solution of contemporary problems.

In announcing the award, University President Reverend Edward A. Malloy, C.S.C., noted, “The Olin Foundation’s renewal of its generous support assures that one of Notre Dame’s finest publications will continue to flourish while maintaining the highest intellectual standards.” Father Malloy further commented that the journal “is steadfast in its advocacy of the principles of natural law and crucial to the moral vision of the University. It is gratifying to know that the Olin Foundation shares our convictions.”

The Olin Foundation has supported a number of the institute’s programs, including its annual spring natural law lecture series. The foundation supports individuals and institutions working to strengthen the free-enterprise system and the American heritage of constitutional government. The foundation seeks to promote a general understanding of these institutions by encouraging the thoughtful study of the connections between economic and political freedoms and the cultural heritage that sustains them. The foundation awards grants in a variety of scholarly areas including public-policy research, strategic and international studies, law and the legal system, and business and economics.

NDLS Faculty Speak at “Culture of Death” Conference

In mid-October, the Notre Dame Center for Ethics and Culture hosted an academic conference titled “A Culture of Death,” concerning Pope John Paul II’s claim that a pervasive “culture of death” threatens the sanctity and dignity of human life in contemporary society. The conference was the first of a triennial series of interdisciplinary conferences on life issues planned by the center. It addressed a wide variety of topics, including war, totalitarianism, abortion, mass communication and the media, physician-assisted suicide, the oppression of women, technology and human flourishing, racism, human dignity and human rights, the arts, the plight of the world’s children, the responsibilities of business, and the exploitation of the developing world.

NDLS faculty who spoke at the conference included Judge John T. Noonan Jr., the Judge James J. Clynes Visiting Professor of Law, Associate Professor of Law Cathy Kaveny and Assistant Professor of Law Rick Garnett.

Dinah Shelton spoke on “Conceptual Development of International Environmental Law” to the Commission on Environmental Law of the World Conservation Union at its Second World Conservation Congress in Amman, Jordan, in October. With Alexandre Kiss, she drafted a resolution, which the congress unanimously adopted, recommending that states use an international minimum standard for environmental protection in the absence of precise legal rules on a particular issue.

The resolution is modeled on the “Marten’s Clause” in the laws of war, which provides that, until a complete code of conduct is adopted, states and individuals must act according to the “laws of humanity and the dictates of the public conscience.”

Later in October, she delivered an address titled “The Impact of Technology on Human Rights” at a conference on “Technology and International Law” sponsored by the national International Law Students Association at Santa Clara University.

She also delivered a lecture on the United Nations Human Rights Commission at the Boalt Hall School of Law in Berkeley. She served on the planning committee and spoke at the AALS “Workshop on Human Rights: Teaching and Scholarship, New Issues, New Approaches.”

Her book, REMEDIES IN HUMAN RIGHTS LAW, was used extensively in developing the Report on Damages under the Human Rights Act 1998, prepared by the British Law Commission, chaired by Honorable Mr. Justice Carnwath. The report analyzes the potential for courts in the United Kingdom to award damages under the new law.
More from the Center …

At the end of October, she participated in a tribute to Thomas Buergenthal, judge of the International Court of Justice, held as part of the celebration of the 20th anniversary of the Inter-American Institute of Human Rights in San Jose, Costa Rica. She spoke at the ceremony, along with dignitaries including Pedro Nikken, former judge of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights, Roberto Cuellar, Executive Director of the Inter-American Institute, and the current president of Costa Rica.

She has also edited a new book on international law titled COMMITMENT AND COMPLIANCE: THE ROLE OF NON-BINDING NORMS IN THE INTERNATIONAL LEGAL SYSTEM. Published by Oxford University Press, the book examines the nature of international law and the various ways in which it is constituted throughout the world. It is the first book to focus on how international norms adopted in forms that are not legally binding—so-called “soft law”—affect the behavior of national governments.

Dinah Shelton Safe After Airline Scare

Dinah Shelton was among 227 passengers on a United Airlines flight from San Francisco to Osaka, Japan, on Wednesday, November 15th, which made an emergency landing at Seattle’s Sea-Tac Airport after the pilots reported smoke in the cabin. She was quoted in the article as saying that the flight attendants told the passengers to “eat fast” because they were coming back through to collect meal trays in preparation for the emergency landing. After mechanics checked the aircraft on the ground in Seattle, the flight continued, uneventfully, to Japan.

Michael Kelly ’83, ’87J.D. was featured in an article headlined “Kelly is a perfect fit with Vikings” in the October 5, 2000, edition of the ST AR TRIBUNE in Minneapolis, Minnesota. The article noted how, after just seven months as the football franchise’s vice president, he has made an impact in a number of areas including the local debate about a new stadium, managing day-to-day operations, maintaining a solid relationship with coach Dennis Green and responding to the team owner’s efforts to increase revenue. The article noted how his cordial disposition has helped him to bring harmony to the front office, and how his business and legal acumen has helped him to work on plans to address the new stadium as well as the Vikings’ problems of staying within the salary cap. The article also mentioned his battle with melanoma 20 years ago, and his extracurricular activities that include being a tenor soloist at the Basilica of St. Mary’s and performing with the Minnesota Opera.

Mike Cloonan ’95J.D./M.B.A. recently returned from the Sydney Olympics where he was an associate producer for NBC Sports. Mike is president of Global Media, a video production company based in South Bend. His upcoming projects include working on the new XFL football league along with the French Open and Wimbledon. Coquese Washington ’92, ’97J.D., now in the off-season from the world-champion WNBA Houston Comets, has returned to the sidelines of Notre Dame women’s basketball games as an assistant to head coach Muffet McGraw. The fifth-ranked Lady Irish began their regular season in mid-November.

Tracy Warren ’99J.D., an associate practicing in the areas of labor and employment law as well as sports law at McGuire Woods, L.L.P., in Baltimore, Maryland, continues to make use of the broadcasting talents that earned her an Emmy for her sports feature, “Marketing Michael Jordan,” when she worked in television at WPHL-TV in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. This summer, she provided color commentary for NBC’s telecast of all 10 U.S. women’s softball games, which culminated with a U.S. gold medal victory.

As an undergraduate at Trenton State College, now the College of New Jersey, Ms. Warren played Division III softball. For the three years she played on the team, she started every game at third base and achieved a .345 batting average. Her team won the national title in 1987, her senior year. Two years later, she earned a master’s degree in journalism from Temple University in Philadelphia, where she also served briefly as the softball team’s assistant coach. After graduation, she worked in broadcasting in both Philadelphia and Grand Rapids, Michigan.

Attending law school was something she had always wanted to do, and welcomed the opportunity to attend NDLS, according to an article in the October 12, 2000, edition of THE DAILY RECORD, a business and legal newspaper in Maryland. She believes that her range of experiences fit together nicely. She describes the combination of women in sports and women in the law, as well as sports and the law, as “a real growth area. It’s a whole new segment that went untouched through the ‘80s and most of the ‘90s, providing all kinds of new opportunities for women in sports and the law, and it’s exciting to be involved on both sides of it.”

While developing her practice, she continues her broadcasting career on weekends and evenings, as a play-by-play announcer for softball games and as a commentator for golf tournaments.

The case, which is before the state’s high court on direct interlocutory appeal, challenges attempts by the City of South Bend to take City Chapel’s downtown church by eminent domain. Mr. Masters argued that the taking violated the chapel’s right to free assembly for religious worship. The case is one of first impression in the state.

Faculty Notes

Bob Blakey ’57, ’61J.D., has extended his RICO expertise into Guerrero v. Gates, the case involving corruption and civil-rights violations within the Los Angeles Police Department. The judge hearing the case indicated that the plaintiff can pursue a claim under RICO, with the LAPD deemed to be the “criminal enterprise” used by the officers in their allegedly corrupt activities. In explaining the importance of the judge’s decision in the September 25, 2000, edition of the NATIONAL LAW JOURNAL, Bob explained, “Calling the LAPD a criminal enterprise simply means the officers might have used [the department] for their own purposes. The false impression has been created that the police department is a defendant and [that the plaintiff] will score big time.” Unfortunately, as the remainder of the article indicated, this nuance has been lost on the press, who have taken to calling the LAPD a “criminal enterprise,” rather than the “enterprise the criminals used to further their aims.”

Honorable Harry Crittenden Dees Jr., of the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Indiana in South Bend and an adjunct associate professor of law at NDLS, has been reappointed by the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals to a second four-year term on the bankruptcy bench.

Rick Garnett commented on court-ordered drug tests for women, at issue in Ferguson v. City of Charleston, in an article in the October 5, 2000, WASHINGTON POST, and in an article titled What Are the Limits on Warrantless Drug Testing of Pregnant Women, in PREVIEW OF UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT CASES.

John Nagle commented in the October 2, 2000, NATIONAL LAW JOURNAL on Solid Waste Agency of Northern Cook County v. U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, a case that the Supreme Court will address this term. A consortium of more than 20 municipalities sued the Corps of Engineers for refusing to give them permission to build a landfill on a 533-acre site northwest of Chicago because water that had collected in pits on that site served as a home to migratory birds. Under the Clean Water Act, the Corps has jurisdiction to protect the habitat. The Seventh Circuit held that Congress had the authority under the Commerce Clause to enact the legislation, but the plaintiffs disagree. John says that the case is “both a question of how you interpret a statute that probably has been broadly interpreted to include this since its enactment, and it’s a constitutional question of what conduct has to substantially affect interstate commerce.”

Tom and Nancy Shaffer report that daughter-in-law Patty, married to Brian Shaffer, was proclaimed an “angel” by Oprah Winfrey on her television show. Patty and three other women at St. Mark’s School in Silver Spring, Maryland, were nominated as “angels” by a teacher whom they helped when she had breast-cancer surgery and chemotherapy. Patty works as a nurse at the school, and the teacher was the second-grade teacher for Patty & Brian’s daughter, Jessica.

J. Eric Smithburn has been named to the board of advisors of the Indiana Juvenile Task Force, Indiana’s largest advocacy group for improving the juvenile justice system for children and families in Indiana. He presented a number of lectures at a conferences on “Evidence in Juvenile and Family Court” and “Advanced Family Law” sponsored by the National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges in Reno, Nevada, in October.
