Juan Méndez Featured in New Book, Honored at Kennedy Center Program

On Sunday, October 8, 2000, PBS presented an event held at the Kennedy Center in September honoring a new book, Speak Truth to Power, by Kerry Kennedy Cuomo, with photographs by Eddie Adams. The book features the personal stories of 51 human-rights activists from around the world, including our own CCHR Director Juan Méndez. The PBS presentations included a dramatization based on the book written by Chilean playwright Ariel Dorfman. Artists reading from the script included Alec Baldwin, Kevin Kline, John Malkovich, Hector Elizondo, Giancarlo Esposito, Signourney Weaver, Alfre Woodard, Rita Moreno and Julia Louis Dreyfuss. Jackson Brown and Hugh Masekela supplemented the drama with individual live performances. President Clinton also addressed the audience at the beginning of the program.

According to Juan, “If you stayed up through the entire program and didn’t blink, toward the end there was a reference to what I said to Kerry as part of my interview with her. I hope you liked it.”
Farewell to Father McDonald

At the end of September, Associate Dean Reverend James E. McDonald, C.S.C., announced that he would be leaving NDLS at the end of the fall semester to accept an assignment from the Congregation of Holy Cross to serve as Rector of St. George’s College in Santiago, Chile.

One of the premier Catholic institutions in South America, St. George’s is the second-largest apostolate of the Indiana Province of the Congregation of Holy Cross, educating 2,700 students from pre-school through high school. For 65 years under the leadership of the congregation, St. George’s has played a critical role in the formation of Chilean leaders. St. George’s graduates hold top leadership positions in Chilean government, universities and businesses. Recognizing this, General Pinochet attempted to expropriate the school during his dictatorship. University President Emeritus Reverend Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C., the late Director of the Center for Civil and Human Rights Reverend William M. Lewers, C.S.C., and Senator Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts helped to derail legal expropriation, but for 12 years, the military junta ran the school.

Fr. McDonald was part of the first administration to operate the school at the end of the junta. The congregation has asked him to return to St. George’s now at an important moment in the school’s history. As rector, Fr. McDonald will coordinate the efforts of the administration of the school and represent it before the Ministry of Education and the Archdiocese of Santiago.

In announcing the move, Dean Patricia A. O’Hara commented, “I know that Father Jim departs with very mixed emotions. He leaves one apostolate that he loves for another in which he also has deep roots. He does so in a spirit of service. Certainly this is the spirit that has characterized his three years in our midst. During his tenure, he reorganized and regularized the Law School’s accounting and budgeting functions, eliminated deficits and balanced the budget, supervised the Admissions Office and the administrative assistants within the Law School, and addressed facility problems under very difficult circumstances. Perhaps most important, however, he has been our Good Shepherd in times of personal, professional and spiritual need.

“This brief announcement cannot do justice to the work that Father Jim has done among us. . . . I know you join me in wishing him well as he undertakes this important new assignment in Chile on behalf of the Congregation of Holy Cross.”

Welcome to Hector Escobar Jr.

In cooperation with the University Libraries, the Kresge Law Library welcomes Hector Escobar Jr. to its librarian-in-residence program. The program offers recent library school graduates the opportunity to experience various aspects of academic librarianship and helps in the recruitment of new librarians who will contribute effectively to the diversity of the profession and the University.

Hector received a master’s degree in library and information science from the University of Texas-Austin this past May. He is particularly interested in reference and public services, but brings with him a solid background in library operations as well, having worked at two of the campuses of El Paso (Texas) Community College.

During his first year in the joint program, Hector will work in three different areas in the University Libraries system — reference, electronic resources and Ibero/Latin American/Latino collections — as well as with Joe Thomas, Head of Technical Services in the Kresge Law Library.

D.C. Attorneys Featured for Press Strategies

Members of the Washington, D.C., office of Kirkland and Ellis were recently featured in an article titled Tom Yannucci: On the Attack in the COLUMBIA (UNIVERSITY) JOURNALISM REVIEW for their efforts to manage the press during high-profile litigation. The article notes how four NDLS alumni, including Eugene F. Assaf ‘89JD, James F. Basile ‘86, ‘89JD and Thomas A. Clare ‘92, ‘95JD, led by Thomas D. Yannucci ‘72, ‘76JD, set ground rules for interviews with clients, including agreements that a reporter won’t confront the client with any surprise document, and how they manage the press by sending letters to editors and lawyers at investigating news organizations. Their efforts work toward two goals: increasing the chances that the reporting will be more carefully scrutinized by senior editors, and lessening the possibility that the client will be contacted for a response at the eleventh hour.

News from the Faculty

Joe Bauer presented a talk on “Napster & MP3.com and the Future of Copyrights” to a meeting of the NDLS Business Law Forum on Friday, September 29.

Quotes from Bob Blakey were included in an article in the September 29, 2000, edition of the WALL STREET JOURNAL, in an article on the federal government’s attempts to pursue litigation under RICO against the tobacco companies. He noted that the government “won big” in a recent hearing in which a federal judge agreed to allow the government to pursue racketeering claims against tobacco companies, because the government now has “the right to litigate and ask to forfeit from the industry all illicit profits,” despite the fact that the judge also denied the government’s request to pursue a suit for the billions of dollars spent on medical care for people with smoking-related illnesses. Bob predicts that the case will be settled, noting that he believes that the cash is “not about case, it’s about conduct.”

On another RICO matter, Bob was counsel for the plaintiffs in Summit Properties v. Hoechst Celanese Corp., a case recently before the Fifth Circuit. The plaintiffs owned properties in which plumbing systems containing polybutylene, a byproduct of oil refining, were installed. The plaintiffs contended that the defendants manufactured and marketed these plumbing systems and components through a complex fraudulent scheme, and claimed that the defendants knowingly made false claims in marketing the product. The plaintiffs alleged that the particular type of plumbing not only failed to perform its intended function, but that it also caused severe property damage. The plaintiffs further alleged that the defendants engaged in a conspiracy to defraud by directing a campaign to make this particular plumbing material the “material of choice,” to create a strong market for the product. The trial judge dismissed the case after the plaintiffs conceded that they had not relied to their detriment on the defendants’ allegedly fraudulent misrepresentations that served as the basis for the RICO claims, because such reliance is necessary to establish proximate cause under RICO. The Fifth Circuit affirmed, stating that the “requirement of reliance by the plaintiff is a commonsense liability limitation.”

Bob also provided commentary for a USA TODAY article on September 12 regarding the case involving scientist Wen Ho Lee and security issues at Los Alamos National Laboratory. He noted that the testimony of the FBI supervisory special agent involved in the case revealed a “stunning weakness” in the government’s case, which led to an acceleration of plea negotiations.

Nicole and Rick Garnett participated in panel discussions at a conference on “Faith and Works: Charitable Choice, Religious Liberty, and Defining the Common Good,” held in Indianapolis in July.
Jimmy Gurulé has published the second edition of INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL LAW: CASES AND MATERIALS (Carolina Academic Press 2000), a casebook he co-wrote with Jordan J. Pau, Cherif Bassiouni, et al. At last count, the 1,135-page book has been adopted by 15 law schools. The October edition of the FEDERAL FORFEITURE GUIDE, of which he is the author, was published and distributed in early October. And the 2000 Supplement to his casebook, THE LAW OF ASSET FORFEITURE is scheduled to be published in November.

In October, he gave the invited Distinguished Lecture at the Florida State University College of Law, speaking on “The Permanent International Criminal Court: Principles of Complementarity and Admissibility.” He delivered that same lecture to the Institute for Advanced Legal Studies in London in November.

M. Cathleen Kaveny participated in a symposium on “Religiously Grounded Morality: Its Proper Role in American Law and Public Policy,” sponsored by Wake Forest University School of Law in October. The paper she presented will be published in the spring edition of the WAKE FOREST UNIVERSITY LAW REVIEW.

Juan Méndez appeared before the Inter-American Court of Human Rights, as chief delegate for the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, at an August hearing on the commission’s motion requesting an injunction against the Dominican Republic on the matter of collective deportation of Haitians. He was accompanied by representatives of the petitioners in the case, who include lawyers for the human-rights programs at Columbia Law School and the University of California-Berkeley, as well as lawyers from the Center for Justice and International Law. The commission had some success on its petition, when the court ordered the Dominican Republic not to deport some named individuals, to allow the return of other named individuals who had been wrongfully deported, to assist in the reunification of those families, and to abstain from retaliation against the commission’s witnesses. The commission did not succeed, however, in obtaining a more general measure enjoining the government from deporting certain categories of people. Nevertheless, Juan feels that the measure is an important precedent because, for the first time, the court has gone beyond protecting only the rights to life and physical integrity, to protecting all other rights under the convention through injunctive relief.

Among other work with the commission, Juan reports success with a “precautionary measure” he drafted to request that the government of El Salvador provide AZT treatment to some 30 named petitioners, all patients of the national health service suffering from advanced stages of AIDS who claimed that only AZT treatment would help them manage the fatal disease. And in October, he appeared before the Committee on Legal and Political Affairs of the Permanent Council of the Organization of American States in Washington, D.C., speaking on “The Rights of Migrant Workers and Their Families,” a topic for which he is the commission’s special rapporteur.

In September, he traveled to San Francisco for a meeting of Amnesty International-USA Lawyers Network at the University of California - Hastings School of Law. Juan delivered the keynote address for the meeting which was dedicated to accountability and international truth-and-justice efforts.

Three new books also contain contributing articles written by Juan, including: The Consolidation of Democracy and Human Rights in Latin America, co-written with Javier Martezcurrena, in HUMAN RIGHTS: NEW PERSPECTIVES, NEW REALITIES by Adamantia Poliss and Peter Shwab, editors; a paper given at a conference at Dartmouth University in August 1998 about Latin American experiences and comparative analysis in THE POLITICS OF MEMORY by Ibi Amadjuine and Abdullahi An Na’im, editors; and The Inter-American System of Protection: Its Contributions to the International Law of Human Rights in REALIZING HUMAN RIGHTS by Samantha Power and Graham Allison, editors. In addition, HECHOS Y Derechos, the review of the Argentine Ministry of Justice and Human Rights, has published an article Juan co-wrote with Gaston Chillier ‘00LLM titled No relativizar los derechos humanos, on cultural relativism, in its fall 2000 issue.

John Nagle published The Recusal Alternative to Campaign Finance Reform in 37 HARVARD JOURNAL ON LEGISLATION 69. He also provided commentary on judicial activism in the current presidential campaign for an article titled Campaign 2000 Focus is ‘Judicial Activism’ but Critics of Right and Left Disagree on Its Definition in the August 21 edition of the NATIONAL LAW JOURNAL.

Golf

The Social Justice Forum held a golf outing on September 19 at the Burke Memorial Golf Course to raise money for its annual Thanksgiving Food Basket Drive. Participants helped raise approximately $400, which SJF will use to buy side dishes for Thanksgiving dinners for needy South Bend Families. The winning team — comprised of 3Ls Mike Johnson, Tim Schank and Chris Schultz, as well as 2L Laura Patterson — scored an impressive 6 under par, while the team that brought up the other end of the field — 1Ls Rory McManama and Adam Witmer — scored an equally amazing 15 over par. Both teams were treated to dinners at local restaurants for their efforts (or lack thereof).

Softball

At the fourth annual Faculty-Student Softball Tournament, held Sunday, October 1, 2000, in the fields across from Stepan Center, things returned to normal after last year’s first faculty victory. The faculty team, lead by Rick Garnett, lost in the first round to the 1Ls and in the second round to the 3Ls to remain in fourth place in all-time Law School softball standings, despite strong fielding and hitting by Dan Manier and Matt Barrett, as well as a surprise performer. According to Rick, “The story-behind-the-story was the deft performance of our favorite natural-law jurisprude, John Finnis. Although John claimed to be unfamiliar with the game — ‘rounders, you call it?’ — and craftily lulled our opponents into the false impression that he was a novice by sporting a Honus Wagner-esque outfit, John was flawless in the field and solid at the bat.”

According to SBA President Rudy Monterrosa, the 1Ls had the largest number of players — around 35 — ever assembled for a team, leading Rudy to call their participation “a little scary.” The 2Ls, however, avenged last year’s performance — in which they gave the faculty their only victory in four years of competition — and prevailed in the first game against the 3Ls and in the second game against the 1Ls to win the championship.
