The Lawyer attempts in this issue to fulfill its obligation to its practicing attorney readers by presenting two articles on the new tax code. It is hoped that the articles, written by specialists, will be of help and interest both to those "on the firing line," and to the law student. The final article on the history of the legal profession continues a series that has been so well received by Lawyer readers.

Merle H. Miller is a partner in the firm, ROSS MCCORD ICE & MILLER, Indianapolis, Indiana. He received his B. A. degree from Butler University in 1927 and his L.L.B. from Harvard University School of Law in 1930. He came to the firm from the Chief Counsel's Office of the Bureau of Internal Revenue where he was Chief of the Interpretative Division from 1937 to 1940. Mr. Miller has been on the Council of the Section of Taxation of the American Bar Association and has been chairman of the income tax and excess profits tax committees of that body. He has written a series of tax articles for Fortune Magazine and is author of "Tax Planning" for the Practicing Law Institute. His services are constantly in demand as a speaker at tax institutes throughout the country.

Co-author, H. Gene Emery, is an associate with the firm, ROSS MCCORD ICE & MILLER. He received his B. A. degree from the University of Illinois in 1945 and his L.L.B. from Harvard Law School in 1948. Mr. Emery is a member of both the Indiana and Indianapolis Bar Associations. He is co-author with Mr. Miller of one chapter in the book, BASIC ESTATE PLANNING, soon to be published by Bobbs-Merrill.

Roger Paul Peters is Professor of Law in the Notre Dame Law School. Professor Peters was an attorney in the Office of Chief Counsel, Legislation and Regulations Division, Bureau of Internal Revenue from 1942 to 1950. He earned his B.A. at the University of Texas and his L.L.B. at the School of Law, New York University. He is a member of the New York Bar, the Bar of the Supreme Court of the United States, the Bar of the Tax Court of the United States and the American Bar Association. Professor Peters has contributed articles and book reviews to the Lawyer and other reviews.

Lawyer readers are familiar with Dr. Anton-Hermann Chroust, Professor of Law in the Notre Dame Law School. His initial article in this series, "The Legal Profession in Ancient Athens," 29 NOTRE DAME LAW. 339 (1954), has been widely acclaimed. He was the Reporter General for the Fourth International Congress of Comparative Law held in Paris, France this past summer. He has contributed to many law reviews and learned journals. The present article will be the second chapter in his proposed book on the History of the Legal Profession.
