Anton-Hermann Chroust is Professor of Jurisprudence, Legal History, and the History of Legal Profession in the Notre Dame College of Law. He received his legal education at five universities in Europe and besides his A.B., M.A., LL.B., LL.M., received his J.U.D. in 1929 from the University of Erlangen, a Ph.D., in 1931 at the University of Munich, and his S.J.D. in 1933 from Harvard Law School where he also taught. Dr. Chroust is also Professor of Institutional History in the Graduate School and a Lecturer at the Medieval Institute at Notre Dame. He has been Chairman of the Committee on Jurisprudence of the International Law Institute in London in 1952. He is the Reporter General for the Fourth International Conference of Comparative Law to be held in Paris, France in the Summer of 1954, and a member of the Medieval Academy of America. His many articles, covering a variety of legal and non-legal subjects, have appeared in many learned journals here and abroad. This article on the Legal Profession in Ancient Athens is to be the first chapter in his book on the History of the Legal Profession.

The second article by Father Albert L. Schlitzer, C.S.C. is partially a supplement to another article written by him in the Fall 1953 issue of the Lawyer. Father Schlitzer is presently an Assistant Professor in the General Program (Theology, Marriage and Evolution) at the University of Notre Dame, where he was formerly Assistant Professor of Religion. He has also taught at Holy Cross College, Washington, D.C. He received his Ph.D., 1931, and S.T.D., 1936, at the Gregorian University, Rome. He is a member of the American Catholic Philosophical Association and Catholic Theological Society of America, the author of Theology of the Sacraments (1950) and Redemptive Incarnation (1953), as well as a contributor to many philosophical and theological publications.

John G. McQuaid is an attorney with his own practice in White Plains, New York. He attended Yale University receiving his B.A. there in 1940 and LL.B. in 1947. He served in the Army Counter Intelligence Corps with two years in the Southwest Pacific. Mr. McQuaid spent one year in Washington, D.C. on the General Counsels staff of the National Production Authority as well as practising five years with the firm of Townley, Updike, Carter and Rodgers of New York City, working mostly in the corporate and tax fields. He is a member of the New York and United States Supreme Court Bars.
